

PERSONAL FALL PROTECTION

SAFETY TALK

grinnellmutual.com

Make sure you know when to wear fall protection equipment and how to put it on correctly. Your harness, lanyard, and anchor are your lifeline in a fall. Remember to regularly check your equipment for damage.

USING FALL PROTECTION

You are required to wear it:

1. If there is an unguarded edge or hole into which you could fall 6 feet or more
2. If you could land on a hazard
3. If you are within 6 feet of open edges of roofs, mezzanines, or loft doors
4. If you are in man lift buckets or on a ledge

Construction based on OSHA standards requires fall protection equipment at 6 feet. General Industry requires fall protection at 4 feet.

CHECKLIST

- Do you inspect the fall protection equipment before using it? Don't use dirty or damaged equipment.
- Do you check possible anchor points to ensure they can hold the required load?
- Is there another person available to help adjust the equipment when you put it on?
- Do you inspect the harness and lanyard for damage after you use them?
- Do you clean the harness and lanyard and hang them up to dry when you're finished?

If fall protection equipment is used during a fall, destroy and discard the harness and lanyard. Remember to inspect the anchor point for damage.
